Most of the events being studied in this topic so family members may have first-hand knowledge of these events. • Read historical works or online materials. There is a range of information that can be accessed at local libraries also. • Visit sites of Historical importance. For example, there are a range of museums which look at a range of controversial human rights themes such as slavery and the Holocaust. While this is outside of the time period that we cover in lessons, it will provide an insightful and though-provoking experience. https://www.liverpoolmuseums.org.uk is an excellent starting point. • Complete further research regarding Human rights or key events of the 20th Century and how they have shaped the Modern World. This has excellent links to our GCSE module of Crime and Punishment. For Example, you are able to focus on key case studies such as that of Doreen Lawrence, who has become a key campaigner in the British Civil Rights Movement.

	3. To analyse which person has had the biggest impact on the world in the 20 th century.
