Artist Fact Sheet

Andy Warhol
1928-1987

Andy Warhol was born in Pennsylvania, USA. He was the fourth child of Andrej and Julia Warhol, who had emigrated from Munkacs (now called Mukachevo), located in today's Slovakia. As a child, Andy Warhol had a serious illness called typhoid fever's chills, and he later developed a fear of hospitals and doctors. While he was ill, Warhol drew, listened to the radio and collected pictures of movie stars.

After leaving school, Warhol studied Commercial Art at the Carnegie Institute of Technology. He moved to New York City to begin a career in magazine illustration and advertising. He began using silk screen printing to make images. This involves pushing ink through a screen to create an image. It can be used to make lots of copies of the same image.

Warhol used this printmaking technique to make artworks that used a repeated image from popular culture, often in different colours. He made pictures of movie stars and celebrities. He made paintings of American celebrities such as Marilyn Monroe and Elvis Presley. He founded his studio, "The Factory", where lots of artists, writers and musicians would visit him.

Andy Warhol died in New York in 1987. He left nearly all of his money (more than $200 million) to the Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts. In his will, he stated that the mission of the foundation would be to "foster innovative artistic expression and the creative process".

Andy Warhol 1929-1987

Artist Style – Pop Art

Pop artist changed the art world in the late 1950s and 1960s. They presented images from every day life and from the commercial world around them. These images came from comic strips, movies, billboards, and grocery store shelves.

Some critics felt that pop art images were a commentary of the proliferation of mass-produced products and contemporary culture. Warhol used a giant Campbell's Soup Can and Brillo Soap Pads as imagery in early art works, reminders of a childhood spent at home while he was ill.

Warhol focused much of his attention to the faces of movie stars and popular celebrities of his time. Many of his Pop art images use high contrast colors and exaggerated "off features" colors.

Artist Technique/Media:

His work and that of other Pop artists used hard edged lines, an impersonal quality using screen printed or painted flat, bright colors, and are satirical and not flattering.
